

Exhibit B

The main chat area is titled "# general". It contains three messages:

- A message from an unnamed user: "you will get get a fair representation of the sentiment unless all SPA holders have equal rights to vote."
- A message from user "Seven" (profile picture of a person with long hair) sent "Today at 1:34 PM": "I'm not able to unstake at this time to vote no, I'm pretty illiquid right now so the only way would be to unwind and sell back the the SPA which would both cost me in fees and push the price down."
- A message from user "ChrisBi" (profile picture of a person with a green background) sent "Today at 1:51 PM": "voted no because the only person on the team isn't trustworthy, ignores community, is full of himself and didn't offer anything to make up for a year of his absence. need any other reason?" (This message has 1 upvote).

Below the chat area is a message input field with a plus icon, a placeholder "Message #general", and icons for attachments, GIFs, voice, and emojis. A status at the bottom right says "Slowmode is enabled."

On the right side of the interface is a "Server Members" list showing several roles and their member counts:
